THE OCALA BANNER.

FRANK HARRIS, Editor.

Mr. McKinley's last speech was a prayer for peace.

The steel strike and the cigar makers strike have ended.

Mrs. Henry W. Grady, widow of the South's great editor and orator, is dead.

The surgeon's knife should be the punishment for rape and all attempts at same.

All sections and all parties are throwing bouquets at President Roosevelt.

Mr. Cortelyou will be retained by President Roosevelt as his private secretary. The senatorial pot is beginning to boil and a warm campaign is promised. The Pensacola Journal truthfully remarks that a "man's life is his best monument." The Atlanta Journal wants the south to erect a monument to President McKinley. A number of southern governors swelled the funeral cortege at Washington. It was a notable funeral. A fair test of the prosperity of a nation is the opportunity it offers young men of taking part in public affairs. Owing to the death of President Mc-Kinley the international yacht races have been postponed until Sept. 26th. In 1868 U. S. Grant said let us have peace. The prayer is now answered.

Universal peace is now hovering over all sections of our country. Czolgosz is on trial. Two ex-chief judges will defend him, but it is anticipated that his conviction and electrocution will be speedy. It is a good sign, says Emile Loubert, president of the French Republic, indeed a sign of healthy, national life, that from their schools and colleges

The man that has lived the life that Roosevelt has-who has lived the life of a millionaire and cowboy-whose father is a northern man and mother a southern woman-ought to be just the man to make a fine president.

DEATH OF PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

The news of the death of President McKinley was received in this city with tokens of profound sorrow.

The fire bell tolled at regular and hour his popularity was greatest. melancholy intervals the sad tydings. The postoffice was draped in mourning and closed.

The flag over the fire department was lowered to half mast, and the national colors at the armory showed office. the same token of respect.

The countenances of the people, and their subdued conversation, showed that they regarded the death of the nation'struler as a personal bereave-

Mayor Fishel issued a proclamation extolling President McKinley's virtues, a denouncing the red-handed madness by which he was cut down in the prime hour of his usefulness, and enjoining the citizens of the community, in respect to his memory, to close all places of business and toll the fire bell and church bells of the city during the hours of his funeral.

Both banks closed all day and were draped in mourning, and these sad emblems were seen on all public buildings, many of the stores and at the portals of many private residences.

The Confederate veterans met at 1:30 in the council chamber and adopted the following tribute of affection, bereavement and sorrow:

"Marion Camp No. 56, United Confederate Veterans, meet this day to mingle their tears with those of the people of the whole nation at the bier of President McKinley whose tragic death cuts short a life whose patriotic influence was fast cementing all sections of our country in bonds of fra-

No person who has died within the century just closed, or the one just opening, is so universally mourned as William McKinley.

The beautiful tributes to his mem. ory, especially from the southern section, show that the bitter memories of the civil strife in which President McKinley was a participant, are buried, and in their place is erected a unified and united country upon whose altars the fires of liberty glow in fulfillment of the sweetest dreams of the Good Time.

Writing from Buffalo to the Times-Union and Citizen Maj. E. W. Peabody says:

The editors and other Floridians here are enjoying themselves to the fullest extent, and many courtesies are being shown them. Senator Mc-Creary and Professor Yocum, the guests of the Times-Union and Citizen, are taking in the whole show.

The governor and his party have attracted' much attention. The gorgeous uniforms and magnificent proportions of some of his staff and the beauty of our Florida ladies have excited comment and elicited much

When the governor called on President McKinley he was met by Private Secretary Cortelyou, who asked him not to leave the city without calling again.

Next Tuesday is Illinois, day, and at the earnest solicitation of Governor Yates, Governor Jennings and party will remain, and attend.

The ladies who have the woman's building in charge gave the Florida ladies a reception yesterday afternoon, which was much enjoyed.

Owing to the rain last night, the evening program of Florida day was dispensed with, much to the relief of several of our editors.

Our Florida troops are making a fine impression, and are having a good time. They acted as military escort to the Governor yesterday, and attracted much attention by their soldierly bearing.

The governor and party were taken from their hotel direct to the Illinois building in an automobile, a courtesy accorded only very distinguished guests, as no vehicles are allowed on the grounds.

No one talks of returning yet, and many will remain over next week. However, a few will leave Saturday and Sunday.

So far all have kept well.

The Florida exhibit is not what it should be, though it is better than we expected. E. W. P.
